Dog Collars

A dealer in dog-collars gives some interesting facts about the collars and their wearers: We have some very queer customers. You will be surprised to learn that I have on hand about fifteen hundred patterns in dog-collars. There's a modest little collar that we sell to the dealers to retail for twenty-five cents, and here's one of solid silver, made to match a lady's bangle bracelet, that you can have for twenty-five dollars. That's about the range of prices. This collar was ordered to match a silver bracelet. Ladies are our best customers, and they will buy the most expensive goods. Sportsmen buy a cheap, substantial collar. They are like Southerners with a five hundred dollar gold watch and a shoestring for a guard. A thousand dollar dog belonging to a sportsman will have a dollar and a half collar, while a cur I wouldn't give house-room, will sometimes wear from ten to twenty dollars' worth of trappings. Pug dogs are now all they go, and there is no limit to the price paid for them. As high as three hundred dollars will be paid for one by a lady sometimes, and then it is brought to us to rig out. Let me show you some blankets for pugs. These bring from five to eighteen dollars each; but we have some even more expensive. Of course the expensive collars tempt thieves, who steal dog and collar both. The other day a gentleman came to me for a collar with an inscription plate on it. He had engraved on the plate: "If this dog is returned to —, twenty dollars reward will be paid." I told him that he was encouraging dog thieves, and besides, the dog, in my estimation, was not worth the reward. He sadly shook his head as he said, "That dog belongs to my wife. She is as fond of him as she is of me." After that, there was no more to be said.

If we may accept Mr. Du Chaillu's account, there is at least one king who goes about unguarded. The King of Sweden asked him to his country house. He found his majesty painting. Not a guard or even servant was about, and the visitor remarked on it. "The soldiers are for the country, not for me," said the King. "I would rather not be a king if I were obliged to have soldiers to watch over me."
